The Argentine cuisine differs from the rest of Latin America cuisine mainly because of its European origins. With Italian and Spanish cuisine as its guides, and the addition of native traditions, Argentine cuisine stands out mainly because of its barbecue, roast beef, empanadas, and world famous dulce de leche.

Mente Argentina's Cooking School has been offering courses in Latin-American regional cuisine for more than 15 years. The professors have diverse and extensive experience teaching not only traditional but also gourmet cuisine. Students will have the opportunity to learn a range of exciting, new cuisine concepts.

Our private argentine cooking lessons are given by an Argentine cook with more than 30 years of experience cooking classic dishes from various regions in Argentina. These classes are held in her kitchen, and because of the personal and intimate style of the class, the recipes can be adjusted to the desires of each participant. The class environment fosters a 100% Argentinean culture, drinking the traditional mate, learning the rich history and the secrets of argentine cooking.
